

Maximize your savings with Section 179

Save $2,400

in taxes for every $10,000 spent*

Section 179 of the US federal tax code allows clinicians that qualify for Section 179 to deduct, within the limits of Section 179, the full purchase price of qualifying equipment and software, providing significant tax savings.

Immediate tax deduction

Deduct the full cost of qualifying equipment, significantly reducing taxable income.

Upgrade to advanced technology

Investing in Nobel Biocare's latest technology enhances patient care and practice efficiency.

Enhanced cash flow

Immediate deductions improve cash flow, allowing for reinvestment in the practice.

Section 179 submission checklist

To ensure your equipment qualifies for the Section 179 deduction, please complete the following checklist. This will help streamline the submission process and maximize your tax benefits. For detailed guidance, consult with a tax professional.

Proof of purchase

Invoices, receipts, or purchase agreements showing the equipment was bought, not leased.

Proof of payment

Bank statements or canceled checks as additional proof of purchase.

Equipment description

Detailed information about the equipment (make, model, and specific features), confirming it qualifies under IRS Section 179 guidelines as business equipment.

Cost of equipment

The total cost of each piece of equipment, including any trade-ins, discounts, or rebates received.

Date of service

The date each piece of equipment was put into service, which must be within the current tax year to claim it for that year.

Business use percentage

Documentation that the equipment is used more than 50% for business purposes.

Usage logs

Logs or records showing the business use of the equipment.

Maintenance records

Records of any maintenance or repairs.

Form 4562

The IRS form required to claim Section 179, including Part I for Section 179 expenses, and Part V for listing each piece of equipment.

Note For precise eligibility and to maximize tax benefits, consulting with a tax professional or accountant is advisable. They can ensure compliance with current IRS guidelines, especially given that limits and deduction caps under Section 179 can vary annually.
